Refuses to Accept Amendment Ending Government Activities Two Years After War.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11 .- President Wilson to-day rejected the compronice Ship Bill evolved yesterday by complete surprise and a long wrangle followed.

Twice during the debate roll calls on motions resulted in a tie, 46 to 46, and each time Vice President Marshal broke the deadlock, voting with the Administration forces. He sustained Senator Lodg's point of order, however, that Senator Reed's proposition was debatable. Senator Norris then moved to amend Senator Reed's motion by ading his proposed cloture rule that no Senator should speak more than three hours on one question. Mr. Norris spoke at length on it.

The parliamentary result of the wrangle, it developed, was to place the ship bill so it cannot be brought up again without a motion. Senator Norris declined to withdraw his amendment and Senator La Follette got the floor and began a discussion of his resolution for an international peace conference.

The development did not materially affect the Senate deadlock because Republicans were prepared to fillegate against the Reed resolution.

It prohibited all persons resident or carrying on business in the Britisi Empire "from paying out any sums of money to or for the benefit of an en-emy."
